Our SOPREMA logo...

Charles GEISEN

SOPREMA, a family owned business founded in 1908, leads the industry as the founder of the first waterproofing membrane of modern history. Charles GEISEN founded the "Alsatian Emulsion Factory" the forerunner of SOPREMA. His stroke of genius came when he began dipping a jute cloth into hot bitumen and the finished product resembled the skin of an elephant. At that time in history, researchers in the Siberian permafrost found the well-preserved remains of a Mammoth that had lived thousands of years before. Charles GEISEN baptized his emerging invention "MAMMOUTH" (the French word for Mammoth). With the tremendous subsequent success of the product, the Mammoth became the SOPREMA logo.
